A: You can find the config file here: The tag "tag_crypt" is present, and looks like this: "tag_crypt" : { "0" : { "name" : "name_0", "value" : "[0, 50]", "disabled" : false } }, The "0" means that it applies to that item id. So, in this example, if you run the command find $localDirectory -type f -iname ".dat" you should find all the files starting with name_0, which, from the config, would be "name_0_50". You can find a list of all the possible options (the tag number is just a label to find quickly what to use for) with this command: find $localDirectory -type f -iname ".dat" | xargs grep "\\[\\{0\\}\\]\\{" Or, to simplify things, use the "sed" command: find $localDirectory -type f -iname "*.dat" | sed's/\[/","/g' | sed's/\\{/\\\[/g' | xargs grep "\\[\\{0\\}\\]\\{" Here's the answer to your second question: The "1" would be a column index, and the "50" would be the value for that column. You can see this from the config, and in the documentation. Basically, it's using the configuration from the game to define what should be displayed for that player, using this number to tell what should be placed at that position.
