Repair of a central venous catheter with a clip applied to the catheter hub. We present a case of a central venous catheter with a frayed and torn hub that was repaired with a clip. A 58-year-old man was being transferred from a local hospital to a tertiary care facility for further cardiac evaluation. When a technician from the facility precluded removal of the central venous catheter, the patient became agitated and was admitted to the intensive care unit. The patient underwent a computed tomography scan of the chest and abdomen that revealed a ruptured segment of the central venous catheter, but no evidence of catheter-related infection. The catheter was removed, and it was determined that the catheter hub had been frayed and torn. A unidirectional, locking, button-style hemostatic clip (Haem-o-Lok, Teleflex Medical, Morrisville, NC) was applied to the hub, and the catheter was relined with new sterile silicone tubing. The patient required no further medical care. The application of locking, button-style hemostatic clips to central venous catheter hubs may be a useful technique for repairing a loose or frayed hub.
