What's New In Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.1.0)?

Q: How to read a txt file and make it into a dictionary python 2.7

File.txt abstract meaning is isn't noun adjective verb adverb adjective noun article conjunction I would like to read this file and make it so I can print every letter in the file as a word but then use it to find the next word and check to see if it is different. For example, if i was to print the word is it would be because is is a word found. But if I were to print the word abstract I would get the word abstract because abstract and abstract are two different words. What I have is with open('File.txt', 'r') as file: fileText = file.read() fileText = fileText.split() fileText = [x.lower() for x in fileText] This makes the fileText into a list and it uses lower() to make it all lower case. How do I use the lowerCase letters to actually make the dictionary? This is what I have done so far. for word in fileText: if "is" in word: print word, word.lower() I want to print every word in the dictionary and it prints the word abstract and it is. So this is what I have to do Print every word in the dictionary and make sure abstract is in there Compare the words to see if abstract or abstract is in there

A: You have a list. You can iterate over a list like this: for word in fileText: if "is" in word: print word, word.lower() I suggest the following: with open("File.txt", "r") as file: fileText = file.read().split() #make sure to "read().split()" fileText = [x.lower() for x in
