Article content continued “He’s like a business manager, he takes care of us on the field and off the field,” said forward Tobin Heath, who has been trained by Brunner since before she became a member of the national team. “He doesn’t just focus on us as players, but he also focuses on our family off the field and helps us to make sure that we are always preparing well and that we can give our best every time we take the field.” Brunner, a former player, has been working with the national team since last April. She has been holding coaching clinics and has been a popular participant in informal discussions with players. “I feel like it has been such a whirlwind for the last month,” Brunner said in a telephone interview from St. Louis. “You know, before that you really don’t think about much but you’re just coming in like ‘Oh, I’m going to work.’ But now you’re like ‘I’m back to this again and I’m coming in for a third time.’ “This is kind of what I love. This is what my passion is, and it’s taken me almost 20 years to get here, and it’s such a gift. I just feel like it’s going to be something special and I hope I can do my part in the next four years to help the team do well, help us win and then after that I’ll go back to the collegiate world.” Brunner, a native of Gladwyne, Pa., was a member of the US team that won the 1995 Women’s World Cup. She has been coaching at the collegiate level at the University of Pittsburgh, West Virginia, Indiana and Kansas. Assessment of quality of caryopses in dry snack food products.
